#1 has the best connections and is in the 1-hole; takes a big drop, switches to Tyler (Drop/Switch), had trouble in last (on dirt); decent dirt works, none on turf. If Tyler gets her out, she has a big shot.
#2 is pretty much a nothing horse with nothing connections in a good spot with first-time blinkers. May give the frontrunners some competition and fade.
Paco is on #4, a FTS, and you never know with Paco.
#5 has highest last race fig (on turf); stumbled and was bumped on the way there; should run better here.
#9 and #10 are grays.
Not enough information to make a wise decision. Therefore, I'm taking a shot with #1.
Might do a 1,6 double and a 1,6,all P3 for a total of $8.

#6 appears to be the quickest of this bunch. May have company from #4 or even #5, but as the outside speed she may have control. Steps up a bit.
Irad evidently woke #5 up in his last; may be that good or better.
Don't see any dedicated closers; doesn't mean no one can close. #5 closed well 5 back, and also a little in his last, but tired after a quick pace.
#1, #3, and #5 are both dropping from 50k maiden turf races, which is not much of a real drop.
5, 1, and 6 have the best connections.
Occam's razor for me. The #6 goes to the lead; catch him if you can.

No dominant speed, period. #1 will probably assume the lead, unless someone like #6 goes crazy; 8-yr-old who hasn't won in forever, makes big drop to claiming.
2 and 5 also 8-yr-olds. They're all terrible ATDS, with 5 and 6 slightly best. Really tough race for me.
I think I'll go with the #1 if I do anything, because I hate him the least of these. If he can get in front, a mile may be too short for the others to catch him. NOTE the #2 is 3rd off a layoff and may make for a decent extacta or tri.

Tyler got on #1 and changed his habits in a hurry; still 0 for 16; BF; may breakthrough here. #2 third race, first on dirt, some good works, not likely, though. #3 runs better 2nd off; chance. #4 drops from maiden race (turf); okay works. #5's third race after 2 okay on dirt, mediocre works. #6 another Arch horse; an Early speed horse without much speed. #7 pretty much like #6, but trouble in last two, perhaps. Third race for #8 and 3rd off; good last race with trouble, BTL, mediocre connections; still... #9, #10, and #11 look pretty hopeless.

According to the PP's, #1 is the dominant speed - if Tyler gets him out again. For surprise speed, I might look at the #4. To close, I'll take the #8.

Six of these runners have posted a sub-:44 ATDS; it will be crowded up front. #3 looks like the best closer, but he's 10 years old. Drops, gets Johnny V, but... #5 has closed a bit in some of his races, and that may be all he needs today, plus his last may have toughened him up; 7 for 8 ATDS. Paco stays on the #2, who runs well off a layoff; NOTE: Paco chooses #2 over #3, #4 and #6. If the jocks let someone get an easy lead, it's over. If there's a crowd up front running as hard as they can, as it should be, I'll take the 7 for 8 horse, #5, plus Paco on the #2, plus maybe #6.

Two mammoth droppers in here: #2 and #4; both 4-year-olds that have never been in for a claim until now. Both have been off for a few months; both have great works since; both can run early, #5 has closed in the past. Third time in the one-hole for #1, placed second in last two, likes the front end. #2 has only run twice on dirt, and never this short. #3 is turf to dirt, 2nd off a layoff, with two great races 2 and 3 back; very quick. #5 also has good early speed, maybe causing a three-horse duel, which I think the #3 will win. Won't play the #6 to repeat that number. Ortiz rode the #2 in its high figure maiden breaker and now opts for #2, which must be considered; slow in the past, but a hot work since. I'm thinking both the #2 and the #4 may be improving 4-year-olds and will treat them as such. Boils down for me to the #3, #4, and #2 for the win. #3 might just get the lead and say bye-bye; class isn't much of an issue on the front end.

#1 ran a nice race in last, with traffic trouble; claimed by Hess, switches to Tyler; very light on works for the past two months. #2 is 3rd off, Torres comes from #1, competitive figs. #3 also 3rd off, drops, mediocre figs, makes pace hotter. #4 also 3rd off, bangup race on off-turf one back (89), FTT, no turf works. #5 broke maiden in last ATDS, keeps Jose. The very beautiful #6 is a BTL, steps up a bit, gets Zayas back. Tyler gets off #7, Saez gets on. Nice works since #8's about the same as all the others. #2, 3rd off with decent figs, might be coming a bit too late. #3 might miraculously make it into the super. I think probably the #3 and #4 and maybe the #7 set the pace, with the #4 winning the duel, to be joined by #1 somewhere near the finish line.

I'm deciding #1 can't do that twice in a row. #2 ran a super race in last, drops a bit. #4 may be a sleeper; trouble in last two, five excellent races before that; steps up a bit in class but has won for 16k here with a 93; his last five trouble-free races average 88; presser. Looks like #2 takes off like a striped ass ape, maybe by himself, maybe with the #1 and #3, wins the duel, and the #4 and/or #5 go by him at the finish. 4,5,2. (Don't think the #4 will go off at 12-1, however.)

I agree with #1, but won't use her. #2 comes from WO, some decent races, best as presser. #4 ran a bangup race in her only turf try, three back here in a 75k stakes, came in third. #5 is quick, probably gets the lead, comes from Penn after a 4-month layoff, never raced at GP, no published works at GP. #6 gets Paco, best races at Ind and Tdn, big race (91) two back at Ind, 4-month layoff, good work here since. #7 hasn't race since May at Tam, only one turf race five back, here, mediocre fig. #8 monster race (97) in last (on dirt), came 2nd against better here; generally Her best race has been off the layoff, like the last one; three turf races last year, all pretty good, okay works. #9 another speed horse but can close; Off since January, okay works since, gets Irad back. So it looks like the #5 and #9 will get the lead together. The #9, on the outside, may have the edge. Then along comes the rest of the bunch. Hard to pick a winner. I might look at 37 as a possible improving 4-yr-old, but 5f on turf is a tough way to come back.

#1 is a PP9T, 3rd off, 8-yr-old with some quickness; BTL; gets Jaramillo; steps up. #2 may contribute to the pace. #3 is 3rd off, has some quickness; bullet since. #4 won his last; steps up; Keeps Paco; 3rd off; good last race (94). #5 keeps Saez; BTL; 2nd after 4-month layoff; average figs. #6 could be the main speed; won last against cheaper; Decent works, gets Rendon. #7 another early speed horse without controlling speed; hasn't closed yet; steps down; keeps Irad for 25% trainer; ok work since; Best last race fig. Paco gets off #8, stays on #3. #9 may be too slow. #10 gets Tyler; steps up; bangup race two back (96) here; comes off short layoff with Good dirt work; 7-year-old; not without a shot.

#6 may get the lead bit probably won't be alone. #7, overmatched in last, can close and win. Can #4 win two in a row? We'll see.
